BENEFICIARIES OF COVERAGE

In case of Accidental Death, if the insured does not refer any beneficiary, the indemnity shall be paid in half to the spouse not legally separated and the remainder to the heirs of the insured, obeying the order of the hereditary vocation. In the absence of the persons referred, those who prove that the death of the Insured has deprived them of the means necessary for their subsistence shall be the beneficiaries. The institution of the companion is valid as a beneficiary, if at the time of the purchase the Insured was legally separated, or was already separated in fact. The beneficiary can be changed at any time by filling out the form with the representative. The last beneficiary change received by the insurance company will always be considered before the occurrence of the claim.
